Purposes

The purposes of this course are to help prepare the student to witness effectively to the Gospel of God through preaching. The act of preaching is a synthetic moment empowered by a critical understanding of God and a dynamic relationship with God, controlled by self-conscious theological method. Exegesis, hermeneutics, theological vision and cultural analysis, as well as sensitivity to life and hearers, come together in the sermon in order to witness to the Good News about and from God for the life of the listening community.

Therefore, it is assumed that students in the course have completed foundational work in Bible, church history and theology. While M-520 will give some attention to exegesis, hermeneutics and theological method, these disciplines will be examined in light of the service they render to the preparation and embodiment of the sermon.

Throughout, attention will be given to three closely related aspects of preaching. First is the content of the sermon, i.e., its theological adequacy and the strength of its witness to the gospel. Second is the form and movement of the sermon. Third is the embodiment of the sermon. All of these elements must be strong if the sermon is to have the best opportunity to accomplish its purpose.

Goals

In order to help fulfill this purpose, the course will include the following components:

1. Basic introduction to preaching as interpretation of the Gospel through theological conversation;
2. Examination of the place and importance of preaching in the life of the church, especially its relationship with worship and the Christian year;
3. Introduction to the theology of preaching;
4. Review of exegetical and hermeneutical method in the service of preaching;
5. Presentation of a method for interpreting Biblical texts, Christian doctrines, social and personal situations in the light of the Gospel;
6. Reflection on the power of language, especially story and metaphor;
7. Consideration of the importance of inclusivity with respect to gender, race, class, national home;
8. Attention to the particular characteristics of the preaching of women and men and preaching in the African American and Hispanic traditions;
9. Focus upon the prophetic and pastoral dimensions of preaching;
10. Acquaintance with the sermons of effective preachers who might serve as homiletical models;
11. Developing working familiarity with different kinds of preaching:
   a. the expository-deductive sermon;
   b. the expository-inductive sermon;
   c. preaching in a mode informed by the African-American tradition
   d. the topical sermon
12. Preparing and embodying sermons;
13. Two sermons will be video-taped.

Grades: Grades are awarded according to the following criteria.

- A = Excellent All aspects of assignment are completed in an excellent manner.
- B = Good Many aspects of assignment done well, but room for improvement.
- C = Satisfactory Aspects of assignment show a basic grasp of assignment.
- D = Poor Shows some grasp of basic aspects of assignment, but needs work.
- F = Failure Missed the fundamental aspect of assignment.

In order to pass the course, all work must be completed. Failure to complete all assignments will result in failure of the course.

In order for a sermon to be given the grade of A, the sermon must be excellent in its theological content, form, and embodiment.

In order for a response paper to be given a grade of A, the paper must clearly present the author’s thesis, show the relevance of the work to the preaching ministry and must give a critical evaluation of the work.

The Seminary expects that a three-hour course requires nine hours of class and preparation time each week: three hours in class and six hours out of class. The instructor advises students to expect to spend the full nine hours each week. This balances the work load of the student across the whole semester and it is reminiscent of parish ministry.

Grades will be computed as follows:

- 5% Response paper to Cleo LaRue, I Believe I’ll Testify; The Art of African American Preaching or to Justo González and Pablo Jiménez, Púlpito: An Introduction to Hispanic Preaching
- 5% Response paper to Mary Donovan Turner and Mary Lin Hudson, Saved from Silence
- 30% Expository-deductive sermon
- 30% Expository-inductive sermon
- 30% Funeral sermon

Class participation (you must participate to get credit for the class)
Guests

Class members may bring guests to class to hear sermons only by prior agreement of the whole class.

Due Dates:

All assignments are due at the beginning of the hour on the day due.

You must submit response papers via email to ron.allen@cts.edu. If the response paper is not received by the beginning of the class hour, the grade will be reduced by one full letter for each day the assignment is late.

Sermons are due to be preached on the days assigned. After the sermon, please give Ron paper copies of the sermon worksheet and one of the following: a manuscript of the sermon or an outline of the sermon.

Note: the instructor will read and grade late work, but will not be comment on it.

Attendance:

Regular attendance and participation is assumed. Two unexcused absences will result in the final grade being lowered one full letter.

Some Notes Regarding Sermons Preached in Class

1. On the day of preaching, students are asked to wear clothing suitable for leadership in public worship in the congregation which the student attends or serves. Liturgical garment (Geneva gowns, albs, etc.) may be worn at the discretion of the preacher.
2. From the time the preacher leaves his or her seat until the time the preacher returns to it, the preacher is to act as if she or he is in front of the congregation on Sunday morning.
3. The preacher is urged to consider the class as the community for whom the sermon is being prepared. In this way the preacher can demonstrate how preaching is related to the life of a community by relating it to the life of the class.
4. After preaching, you are to give the instructor a copy of the sermon and a copy of the sermon worksheet which sets forth the sermon in a sentence, the hope for the sermon and the gospel content of the sermon (Appendix #9).
5. Sermons can be no longer than 7 minutes; if the sermon is longer there will be inadequate time for feedback. NOTE: If the sermon runs longer than 7 minutes, the instructor will stop the sermon at the 7-minute mark.
6. On the day of preaching, the format will be:
   a. Preach (seven minutes)
   b. Oral feedback from instructor and students using the categories developed on the sheet entitled “Responsibilities of the Listener” (Appendices #5 and 6)
   c. Written critique from the instructor at least a day later
   d. On days when the sermon is videotaped, the student will need to make an appointment with the instructor to go over the tape. Students must furnish their own tapes
Inclusive Language

Except when quoting from other writings, writers of papers are urged to use inclusive language. For example, generic language phrased in sex-specific terms and the use of gender designations for inanimate objects should be avoided (e.g. "brother" when the meaning is human being or person; "her" as the pronoun for an inanimate object). Language for "God" should be selected with great care so that the metaphors and grammatical forms are faithful to the biblical revelation of God whose being transcends titles, names and metaphors. The following may be helpful guides: Keith Watkins, Faithful and Fair, (Nashville, TN: Abingdon Press, ©1981) and "Inclusive Language Guidelines for Use and Study in the United Church of Christ," June 1980, United Church of Christ Leadership Resources, P.O. Box 179, St. Louis, MO, 63166

Written Material Concerning the Sermon

After preaching, the student preacher will give to the instructor a completed copy of the sermon worksheet (See Appendix #9) and a copy of the manuscript or outline. The instructor will try to return these materials with critical commentary on the next day of class.

Watching the DVD

The student is responsible for making an appointment with the instructor to give a critical viewing to each of the sermons which have been put on the mini-DVD. The viewing sessions will take place in Ron’s office. Failure to make such appointments will result in a grade of F for the course.

Responsibility of the Listener

When preaching the expository-deductive sermon and the expository-inductive sermon or the topical sermon, each student will be designated, in round-robin fashion, to critique the sermon from the following viewpoints:

a. Good news from God (gospel content)
b. Theological adequacy
c. Significance: will this sermon make a difference to the listeners?
d. Treatment of the Biblical text or the topic
e. Structure and movement
f. Illustration
g. Embodiment

For further description of these assignments see Appendices #4 and #5.

The deductive-expository inductive sermon in the Puritan Plain Style; you will preach this type of sermon as your first preaching assignment.

Read: Interpreting the Gospel, pp. 159-176; 259-267; and Patterns of Preaching, pp. 7-13.

Women and the Experience of Preaching

Due: 2-page response to Mary Donovan Turner and Mary Lin Hudson, Saved from Silence, in which the student sets forth the authors’ thesis, relates the thesis to the preaching ministry and offers a critical evaluation. The student might find it helpful to identify the characteristics of women as preachers.

Discussion in preparation for preaching in class.
We will focus on matters related to preaching in class and on preaching generally.
Come prepared with a question about preaching for Ron Allen or the class. Be imaginative, even freewheeling.

Read: Interpreting the Gospel, pp. 221-256, Appendix #4 (to this syllabus).

Preparing to Preach in Class
September 14  Introduction to Preaching in the African American and Hispanic Traditions, and Stating the Core of Your Own Theology

In the first part of the class, we will focus on preaching in the African American Tradition while the second part of the class will focus on the Hispanic tradition, and the third part of the class focusing on your own theological position.

Your first assignment is to choose one of these traditions and to develop a sermon (on your text below) incorporating or adapting insights from that tradition that you think have the possibility of enriching your developing preaching voice. Please read both books below (LaRue as well as Jiménez and González) and write a two page paper as indicated.

Your second assignment is to review A Faith of Your Own: Naming What You Really Believe and to complete the Final Exercise and to bring copies of pp. 132-135 for the class.

*Discussion of Cleophus J. Larue, I Believe I’ll Testify: The Art of African American Preaching

DUE (if you focusing on the African American tradition): 2 page response to LaRue. Your response should include the following:
(1) LaRue’s major theses concerning preaching in the African American preaching tradition;
(2) what you have learned from the African American preaching tradition that you might apply in your own preaching
(3) an assessment of Larue’s work. (See Appendix #3)

The dynamics of sermons in the African American preaching tradition.

For some practical guidance, see Appendix 3 “Some Considerations When Developing a Sermon Informed by the African American Preaching Tradition”

*Discussion of Jiménez, Pablo A. and Justo L. González, Púlpito: An Introduction to Hispanic Preaching

DUE (if you are focusing on the Hispanic tradition): 2 page response to Jiménez and González. Your response should include the following:
(1) The major theses of the book concerning preaching in the Hispanic community;
(2) what you learned from the Hispanic preaching community that you might want to bring into your own preaching;
(3) an assessment of this book.
The dynamics of sermons in Hispanic communities

Read: Patterns of Preaching, pp. 98-103.

A central part of responding to the sermons that students give in class is to assess the degree to which the student’s sermon is consistent with the student’s own theology. To prepare for this part of the assignment, each student will be asked to distribute copies of her or his Final Exercise (from A Faith of Your Own), pp. 132-135 and to comment in two minutes on your understanding of God and on other elements of your theology that are most important to you.

Appendix #1
A Simplified Outline of Sermon Preparation
For the Expository Sermon

Interpreters need to become aware of the unconscious and conscious biases that we bring to our interpretations of the Bible and of the Gospel. These biases are often social, economic, political, national, racial and theological. Our preaching of the Gospel will become more effective as we become self-conscious and critical of such biases. We can also make positive use of such biases in our encounter with the text and in the sermon. For further development, see Interpreting the Gospel, pp. 119-176

1. Open yourself to the divine presence through prayer
2. Before reading, or otherwise directly engaging the biblical text, doctrine, practice or situation, describe your preassociations, and those of the congregation.
   a. Let your mind and heart associate freely with the subject of the sermon. What comes to you? Jot down your uncensored initial associations. What do these preassociations tell you about your relationships with the subject?
   b. What emotions does the subject of the sermon stir? Do these predispose you toward the subject in any way?
   c. What images come to the screen of your mind in connection with the sermon subject? Do these images preorient you to the focus of the sermon?
   d. Can you recollect experiences, memorize, awareness of what others have said about the subject?
   e. Suppose a member of the congregation looks into your eyes and asks, “Pastor, what do you think about this topic right now?” What do you say? Are you willing to risk the possibility that the conversation could cause you to change?
   f. As you meditate on the subject of the sermon, what questions come to you? Are you curious? Unsettled? Dissatisfied with a previous perspective?
   g. Do you have an intuition about where this sermon might go? Eventually you need to reflect critically on such hunches, but begin by getting them on the screen.
   h. Do you care about the subject of the sermon? If the conversation leads you to the point that you must risk something of yourself in the sermon, do you care enough about the subject to do so, and to live with negative congregational reaction?
   i. Which of your preassociations seem most loaded, most charged, most capable of influencing the sermon?

3. As possible, read aloud the pertinent material on which the sermon draws.
4. List as much as you can that you need to know about the biblical passage, doctrine, practice or situation in order to understand it in a satisfactory way.
5. Clarify the meanings of key words, concepts, images, characters and other elements central to the biblical text, Christian doctrine, practice or situation.
6. Insofar as possible, identify the historical context of the biblical passage, Christian doctrine, practice or situation and the purposes of the text or other matter in its context, as well as the form, characteristics and function of the text, doctrine or practice.
7. Insofar as possible, identify the literary or rhetorical form, characteristics and function of the text, doctrine or practice.
   a. What is the form of the biblical text or other material that is central to the sermon?
   b. What are the characteristics and movement of this form, and how are they manifest (or adapted) in the material that is central to the sermon?
c. In the case of a smaller unit of material (e.g., a parable, a legal saying), does the piece perform a particular function within the larger form of which it is a part? And how is the larger setting affected by the individual passage?

d. What are the effects of this text on the listener?

8. Imagine as much as you can about the world of the text, doctrine, practice or situation. What do you see? Hear? Smell? Taste? Touch? Feel? Think?

9. Investigate how the larger church has interpreted the text, doctrine, practice or situation in history.

10. Note how your historic denomination has interpreted the text, doctrine, practice or situation.

11. Note how your particular contemporary theological family (revisionary, postliberal, liberation, evangelical) orients you to interpret the text, doctrine, practice or situation.

12. Identify the vested interests in the Bible passage, doctrine, practice or situation. Could these materials be used to support the interests of some at the expense of others?

13. How is your understanding of the biblical text, doctrine, practice or situation enriched by the social sciences (e.g., psychology, sociology, political and economic analysis), the physical sciences, phenomenology, philosophy and the arts?

14. Drawing on the previous materials, summarize your understanding of the witness of the Bible passage, Christian doctrine, practice, or situation in its historical and/or literary content.

15. Evaluate your understanding of the witness of the text or topic according to the criteria of appropriateness to the gospel, intelligibility and moral plausibility.

a. Is the witness appropriate to the gospel?

b. Is the witness of the text intelligible?

   (i) Is the witness of the text clear?

   (ii) Is the text logically consistent within itself and is it consistent with other things that Christians say and do?

   (iii) Is the text believable

16. Describe your experience with the witness of the biblical text, doctrine, practice or situation, and that of the congregation.

   a. Review the preassociations generated in Step 2. In your rumination since that step, what has emerged that seems especially important?

   b. What are your memories, and those of the congregation, regarding the testimony of the text, doctrine, practice or situation? How do these memories orient you and the community positively or negatively toward that subject?

   c. Where, and how, do you and the congregation come into contact with text, doctrine, practice, or situation? Person to person? In groups? Through the media? How do these contacts affect your perception of that witness?

   d. What are the major incidents (if any) that contribute to your perception, and that of the congregation, concerning the text, doctrine, practice, or situation? Have the effects of these incidents lingered in the congregation?

   e. What emotions does your understanding of the text or topic arouse in you? In the congregation? How do these emotions affect your relationship with the text or topic? For instance, do they get in the way? Are they a point of positive contact?

   f. What are your convictions, and those of the congregation, concerning the witness of the text, doctrine, practice or situation? Are these convictions deeply held, the result of serious thought in combination with powerful emotion? Are they less deeply held, perhaps the result of inheriting an idea without reflecting on it?

   g. What are your hopes, fears, and other responses (and those of the congregation) concerning the witness of the tenor topic? How do these affect you as you find yourself in the middle of preparing a sermon on that subject? How do you think they will affect the congregation’s participation in the sermon?

h. What do you anticipate to be the future of the witness of the text or topic in the congregation? For example, do you think it will be a part of the congregation’s landscape for a long time to come? Is it likely to disappear with this sermon? Is the sermon likely to spark (or fan) a brushfire?

17. When preaching on a biblical passage, doctrine, practice or situation in the context of the Christian Year, note how that context orients the interpretation of the material.

18. Identify the hermeneutical relationship that will guide the sermon:
   a. Do I run with the witness with a minimum of explanation?
   b. Do I arrive at a positive interpretation of the text or topic by moving from surface to deeper dimensions?
   c. Do I take issue with a witness
   d. Do I ignore the text or topic?

19. Formulate a compact summary of the direction of the sermon.

20. Assess the relationship of the congregation to the direction of the sermon as developed in Steps 14-19.
   a. The congregation may be informed and enthused about the direction of the sermon.
   b. The congregation may be favorably inclined toward the direction of the sermon but have an inadequate understanding, or experience, of the direction of the sermon, or may not know how to act in response.
   c. The congregation may have a clear understanding or experience of the direction of the sermon, but act out of character with it.
   d. The congregation may be apathetic about the direction of the sermon.
   e. The congregation may be unfavorably inclined, even resistant, toward the direction of the sermon as a result of unconscious factors.
   f. The congregation may be unfavorably inclined, and actively resist the direction of the sermon as a result of consciously considered factor.

21. Describe how you hope participating in the conversation will affect the congregation in thought feeling and will.
   a. What do I hope the congregation will think as a result of participating in the sermon?
   b. What do I hope the congregation will feel?
   c. How do I hope the sermon will affect the congregation’s will?

22. Take a time-out to list the questions, issues, perspectives, data, stories, experiences and other materials, that need to be in the sermon for the sermon to serve its purpose.

23. Decide whether the sermon will largely move deductively or inductively.

24. Arrange the main questions, issues, resources, explanations and data in a sequence that serves the purposes of the sermon and the relationship of the congregation to the direction of the sermon.

25. Decide how to begin the sermon.

26. If possible, decide how to end the sermon

27. Develop the whole sermon.
Appendix #2
Rough Outline
Expository-Deductive Sermon

Part I: Beginning (5-15% of sermon)
-- arouses the interest of the listener
-- introduces the subject

Part II: Statement of the Subject of the sermon (very brief)
-- tells the listeners what the sermon is about and suggests that it is important to them
-- needs a smooth transition into the exposition of the text

Part III: Exposition of the Biblical Text (35% of sermon)
-- lifts up only those aspects of the text that are directly relevant to this sermon
-- is given in language that lay people can easily grasp
-- is given color and life by graphic speech
-- needs a smooth transition into the application of the exegesis

Part IV: Application to the Congregation (35% of sermon)
-- applies the main point of the sermon directly to the lives of the listening community
-- must contain concrete examples of how the main point of the sermon makes a difference to the listeners
-- needs a smooth transition into the conclusion

Part V: Ending (5-15%)
-- leaves the listener with a strong positive impression of the main idea of the sermon
-- does not simply “rehash” or “summarize” the main points
-- really “finishes” the sermon

Your assignment: to prepare a sermon according to this outline with the parts clearly marked;
to set out the transitions from one section to another so that they can be clearly recognized.
Appendix #3

Some considerations when developing a sermon informed by an African-American pattern.

1. The movement from text to exegesis towards the main ideas for the sermon is much the same in the African-American traditions as in the way in which this was taught in the first part of our course. African-Americans would tend to emphasize:

   a. The oral character of the Bible (56-59*). As you read the Biblical text, try to hear it and speak it. Think of it as your family story, as your elders and ancestors speaking to you. Listen for the communal message of hope and encouragement the text would speak.

   b. Detail in the text (60-63). Look for details in the text whose importance may not be obvious to the casual reader. Take advantage of this with the use of creative scholarship and life experience.

   c. Imaginative elaboration (63-66). Try to elaborate the text in an imaginative way. Enlarge the text with details that spin out of your imagination while still being true to the intent and exegetical realities of the text.

   d. Identification (66-69). Place yourself imaginatively in the unfolding of the story. Experience the text from the standpoint of being in it. In the sermon you might make a witness as to what the text means to you from this standpoint.

   e. Storytelling (69-75). Make sure your sermon has a story which is well developed. You might try an eyewitness account.

2. Think about how African-American approaches can help you develop your own personal style in preaching. If you are African-American, the idea is to identify and develop aspects of your style which are genuinely yours. If you are Euro-American, the idea is not to “play like you are Black,” but to consider ways in which African-American models might help you identify and formulate that which is authentically you in your preaching.

   a. Mannerisms (88-89). Are there mannerisms that are genuine expressions of who you are and which can serve the preaching of the gospel?

   b. Tone (89-91). Can you develop voice tones which are expressive and which underlie the celebration of God’s presence?

   c. Rhythm (91-92). Can you feel the movement of the sermon, its ebb and flow, its rise and fall, its crescendo and climax? You arrive at this by paying attention to aspects of the sermon which include increasing and decreasing voice intensity, various levels of physical energy, projection, placement of short and long sentence constructions, emphasis and de-emphasis upon syllables in words. Can you give yourself to this movement?

   d. Call and response (92-103). This is common to much African-American preaching. Many Euro-Americans do not expect the congregation actually to respond aloud. Can you find ways of calling the congregation to respond at least in their hearts and minds?
Mitchell identifies dialogue as one of the principal characteristics of African-American preaching (100ff). Dialogue can be spoken aloud between the preacher and the congregation. Or it can take place in the hearts and minds of the congregation as they respond to the preacher. What are the signs in your sermon that it is genuinely intended to elicit dialogue with the listeners, either spoken or unspoken?

   e. Subjectivity and rhetorical flair (95-96). Can you “let yourself go” in the sermon? Can you express your thoughts with emotional intensity which is consistent with the depth and power behind them?

   f. Slow delivery (96-97). Can you deliver the sermon in a patient way, beginning slowly and building towards a climax?

   g. Aphorisms and hesitation (97-98). Look for clever, pithy statements and figures of speech in your speech patterns. Can you make repetitive use of these in your sermon? They can help keep the sermon focused, guide the listener through the sermon, help the congregation remember the direction of the sermon, and serve as brief summaries to the sermon along the way.

3. Mitchell identifies several characteristics and types of African-American preaching. As you are putting your sermon together, please try to take these into account. Study this material carefully.

   a. Introduction (115-116). In a personal way, try to introduce an important issue with which the hearers can immediately identify.

   b. Sermon types (116-119). Select either the expositional type or the narrative/storytelling type as the basic style for your sermon.

   c. Celebration (119-122). This is essential. It is the celebration of the good news of God as this news has come through the text and sermon. It always comes last in the sermon. It needs to be vivid and powerful.

For more help on sermon types, see Henry Mitchell, Celebration and Experience in Preaching. In the latter book, Mitchell identifies several styles.
Appendix #4
Responsibilities of the Listeners for the Expository-Deductive Sermon, the Expository-Inductive Sermon and the Topical Sermon

On the days of preaching, each student will be asked to critique the sermon. Seven students will be designated, in round-robin fashion, to critique the sermon from one of the following viewpoints. Because of the limitations of time, each critique statement can be only about one minute in length.

a. Gospel content. What is the good news in this sermon? Put your response into one clear, indicative sentence.

b. Theological Adequacy. Please answer three questions in your evaluation:
   1. Is the content of the sermon appropriate to the gospel?
   2. Is the content of the sermon intelligible to modern people?
   3. Is the content of the sermon morally plausible?

c. Significance.
   How will the hearing of this sermon make a difference in the lives of the listeners? If so, what is that difference?
   If the sermon does not seem to make an important contribution to the lives of the listeners, what could be done to make it do so?

d. Treatment of the Biblical Text.
   Has the Biblical text been interpreted in a way which is exegetically careful?
   Has the text been interpreted in a way which is theologically adequate?
   Is the treatment of the text consistent with the gospel?
   Is the presentation of the text in the sermon sufficiently clear of technical terminology to be understood by the “average listener?”
   Is the treatment of the text in the sermon lively and interesting?
   If not, what could be done to improve it?

Treatment of the Topic (for the topical sermon).
   Does the preacher have a sharp, clear focus?
   Has the preacher researched the topic carefully?
   Has the preacher given a fair representation of the viewpoints of others?
   Is the topic discussed in language that is accessible to all in the congregation?

e. Structure. Did the sermon correspond to the assigned structure?
   Did it “move” smoothly from start to finish?
   If not, where were the troublesome points and what could be done about them?
   Did the introduction give the listener reason to listen?
   Did the conclusion leave the listener with a strong and forceful image of the main thrust of the sermon?

f. Illustration. Did the sermon contain at least one real-life illustration which was important to the development of the sermon?
   Were the illustrations believable?
   Were the illustrative material and the allusions inclusive of different kinds of persons (white, black, male, female, married, unmarried, old, young, etc.)?
   Was the language of the sermon sufficiently graphic and vivid to help make the sermon interesting, but carefully enough used that it did not call attention to itself?
   Were there some colorful turns of phrase?
g. Embodiment. Was the style of delivery consistent with the content of the sermon?
   - Was the style of delivery consistent with the gospel?
   - Was there sufficient energy on the part of the preacher?
   - Could the preacher be heard?
   - Was there good eye contact? Use of the body (e.g., gestures, posture)?
   - Were the notes handled in a discrete way?
   - Did the preacher make effective use of the pause?
Appendix #5
Responsibilities of the Listeners for the Sermon informed by the African-American and Hispanic Traditions

Several of these criteria are drawn from Mitchell, Black Preaching

1. Gospel Content. What is the good news from God in this sermon? Does the message have a communal dimension? Is it a message of hope and encouragement?

2. Theological adequacy. Is the sermon appropriate to the gospel? Intelligible? Morally plausible?

3. Treatment of the Biblical text. Has the preacher treated the Biblical text responsibly? Has the preacher made creative use of Biblical scholarship? Has the preacher paid attention to the details of the text? Has the preacher dealt with the text imaginatively?

4. Structure. Is the sermon structured so that it is made up of four or five blocks of material or “moves” that flow naturally from one to another in a kind of plot-like organization? Is there a clear introduction that alerts the listener to the subject of the sermon? Are the transitions clear and easy to follow?

5. Imagination. Does the preacher make good use of imagination by helping the listener experience the text and the main point of the sermon? Does the preacher employ the use of elaboration—imaginatively elaborating on the details of the text? does the preacher employ identification—asking the listeners to identify with a certain character in the text or sermon? Does the preacher use alliteration, aphorisms?

6. Celebration. Does the preacher bring the sermon to a celebrative climax which celebrates God’s presence, power, goodness? Does the preacher help the congregation see that God’s love and power give the listeners hope to live through another week? Does the celebration contain powerful cognitive and emotive elements? Does it dramatize the theme of the sermon? This is a crucial element and should be about twenty percent of the sermon.

7. Embodiment. Does the delivery progress from slow and patient style at the beginning to intensity and noticeable celebration in style at the end? Does the preacher make use of rhythm? Does the preacher show evidence of her or his personal style? Does the preacher make use of call and response? (If the congregation responds, does the preacher react appropriately?)
APPENDIX #6

Some Periodicals, Books, Web Resources and Other Resources for Preachers

This brief, annotated bibliography lists some periodicals and other resources that preachers can use in week by week sermon preparation and to help keep up to date in the field of preaching. I first list a basic help for all pastors. Other helps are listed in alphabetical order. I list only publications that relate directly to preaching. Pastors should also subscribe to standard theological and ministerial journals, e.g., Encounter, Interpretation, The Christian Century, Theology Today.[1]

A number of these resources are geared to the Revised Common Lectionary. The table of readings for the lectionary is available in numerous places. Two standard resources are Consultation on Common Texts, The Revised Common Lectionary (Nashville: Abingdon Press, 1992) and the Vanderbilt University Divinity School Lectionary Project, http://lectionary.library.vanderbilt.edu/.

Homiletic is a journal to which every preacher should subscribe. It contains reviews of major books in preaching. It also reviews books from other disciplines that relate to preaching. Major categories are preaching, history of preaching, biblical interpretation, theology, worship, communication theory, art and media, human sciences and culture and dissertations. 2 issues per year. To subscribe: Homiletic, Lutheran Theological Seminary, 61 West Confederate Avenue, Gettysburg PA 17325.

African American Lectionary. This entirely on-line resource, initiated by Martha Simmons is a lectionary attuned to the special characteristics of African American congregations. It combines elements of the Christian Year with days such as Deacon Sunday and the Pastor’s Anniversary. http://www.theafricanamericanlectionary.org/ on a separate year in the Revised Common Lectionary. Exposition of texts in lectionary, but with critical appraisal of selection of texts, their relationship to one another on the days they are read together, theological themes that are present and absent in individual texts and in lectionary as a whole.

Emphasis. Contains columns by a variety of authors on a variety of subjects related to preaching. Also contains illustrations, features (including sermons), worship ideas. Coordinated with Revised Common Lectionary. 517 S. Main Street, P.O. Box 4503, Lima, OH 45802-4503.

Feasting on the Word, edited by David L. Bartlett and Barbara Brown Taylor (Louisville: Westminster John Knox Press). Twelve volumes in all. This is now THE standard resource for preaching from the lectionary. For every reading in the lectionary, it contains about 1,000 words of commentary from each of the following perspectives: theological, pastoral, exegetical, homiletical. The authors are from a wide array of racial/ethnic communities, gender orientations, male, and female, and theological and exegetical points of view.

Homiletics. This resource is largely written by Leonard Sweet and a small group of associates. It contains exegesis, illustrations and homiletical helps for each week. It comes in four issues a year. Issued monthly. Communication Resources, Inc., 1425 W. Maple Street, P.O. Box 2625, North Canton, OH 44720. http://www.homiletics.net/Default.asp e-mail: order@ComResources.com.

Lectionary Homiletics. For each Sunday of the Christian year, contains exegesis of selected texts, pastoral implications, review of previous sermons on the text(s), suggestions for preaching the lesson, review of how the lesson has been interpreted in art, and a fully developed sermon. Issued monthly. 13540 E. Boundary Road, Building 2 Suite 105, Midlothian, VA 23112 http://www.lectionary.com/.
No Other Foundation. Contains sermon and exegesis for one text a Sunday. Contributors are largely scholars and pastors in the United Church of Christ. Two issues a year. Wisconsin Conference of the UCC, 2719 Marshall Ct., Madison, WI 53705.

Preaching. Contains sermons, interviews with well-known preachers and scholars, articles about preaching, book reviews, and sermon starters. Issued 6 times a year. P.O. Box 369, Jackson, TN 38302-0369 http://www.preaching.com/preaching/ e-mail: 74114.275@compuserve.com Proclamation 2. The individual volumes in this series are issued according to the segments of the Christian year—Advent, Christmas, Epiphany, Lent, Easter, Pentecost, Ordinary Time. Each volume provides exegetical and homiletical insights for each of the lessons for the day. Each volume is written by three or four scholars. Minneapolis: Fortress/Augsburg Press, 426 South Fifth Street, P.O. Box 1209, Minneapolis, MN 55440-1209.

The Living Pulpit, issued quarterly. Each issue is organized around a theme, e.g., joy, forgiveness, Jesus Christ. Includes articles, sermon starters, provocative quotes. Contributors tend to be well known scholars and preachers. Issued 6 times a year. 5000 Independence Ave., Bronx, NY, 10471 http://www.pulpit.org/ e-mail: staff@pulpit.org.

Workingpreacher.org. This is one of the more reliable websites whose focus is to help ministers with preaching sparked by the Revised Common Lectionary. Sponsored by Luther Seminary in Minneapolis, it provides a commentary by a recognized scholar on each of the lessons for the week.

Appendix #9
Sample Sermon Worksheet

Name ____________________________ Date __________________

Sermon __________________________________________________________________

1. State the sermon in a sentence. Use the following form: subject = God; verb = an activity of God; predicate = a result of God’s activity.

2. State what you hope this sermon will accomplish in the listeners. What do you hope will happen in the listeners as a result of hearing this sermon? How do you hope they will a) think? b) feel? c) act? Note: this section is very important.

3. Briefly describe the movement of the sermon. Why did you put the sermon together as you did? Why did you start where did you and move as you did and end as you did? What were you hoping would happen in the listeners’ reception of the sermon at each stage?

This is not an account of the steps you took to get to the point of preparing the sermon. This is supposed to be a description of why the sermon is structured as it is and why you put your material where you did in the sermon. For instance, “I begin the sermon with a story because I think this will help the listeners identify with the problem with which the sermon deals. I then articulate questions covered by the story. I hope these will help the listeners recognize and voice their own questions,” etc.
Appendix #10

Christian Theological Seminary

Guidelines for Term Papers and Policy on Cheating and Plagiarism

Every student who enrolls at Christian Theological Seminary will be required to do considerable theological research and reflection, much of which will be submitted in written form. There is no guarantee that a term paper submitted in proper form will save a poor paper; neither is there any guarantee that poor form will ruin a good paper. There does, however, seem to be some correlation between excellence of form and excellence of presentation. In order to submit papers in proper form, the following guidelines are suggested:

Spacing

Double-space the text of the paper. Direct quotations of two or more sentences or more than three lines in length should be single-spaced and blocked in to a margin of four spaces on the left side of the text.

Margins

The margin on the left side of the page should be 1½”. Margins on the other three sides should be 1”. The first page of the paper and subsequent main divisions should have a 2” margin at the top.

Indentations

Paragraphs should be indented six spaces for the text. Paragraphs within a direct quote should be indented four spaces from the body of the quotation.

Corrections

Do not turn in a photocopy as the original. Typewritten (rather than computer generated) papers should be corrected using correcting paper or liquid paper. Do not make corrections in pencil. Do not strike over mistakes.

Proofreading

It may take a little extra time to proofread the paper, but even the best typists make mistakes. Proofread one time for content only; proofread again for typographical errors.

Quotations

All term papers are to be your original work. It is not original if you type what others have written and use connecting phrases to tie it all together. Good research will naturally involve consulting others to discover what has been written and to assist you in the development of your own ideas on the subject. If the exact words of someone else are essential to the thrust of your paper, this constitutes a direct quotation and must be noted by the use of quotation marks to avoid plagiarism. When the ideas of another person are incorporated into your paper and you have either paraphrased or summarized that person's material, it is known as an indirect quotation and must be footnoted to avoid plagiarism. (See the CTS "Policy on Cheating and Plagiarism.")

Notes

There are two kinds of notes -- content and reference. Content notes provide incidental comments upon, amplify, or explain the text but are disruptive to the flow of the paper. These notes should be placed at the bottom of the page. Reference notes cite the authority for statements in the text and acknowledge the source of the information. Information used directly or indirectly must be acknowledged.

Term papers submitted as part of the requirements for a class may use the following form for acknowledging borrowed material within the text of the paper -- set in parentheses the author's last name, the date of the material used, and the page number. Footnotes may still be used with this method of citation to provide information not relevant to the body of the paper but may be helpful as background.
Sources used in the preparation of the paper should be listed at the conclusion of the paper in a bibliography. Include materials quoted as well as those consulted (though not quoted) if they were important in the development of the paper. All materials should be arranged alphabetically by the last name of the authors. If more than one work is used by the same author, arrange them chronologically by date of publication.

Each term paper should have a title page providing the following: title of paper, name of student, professor and course title for which the paper is being submitted, date, name of the seminary, and student mailbox number.

If the paper contains chapters, charts, illustrations, or other divisions or explanatory material, a preliminary page should be provided listing them and the page number for the explanatory material or the beginning of the chapters. For spacing and format consult John L. Sayre, A Manual of Forms for Term Papers and Theses, 4th ed. rev. (Enid, Oklahoma: Seminary Press, 1979). For basic reference to form, footnotes and bibliography, great use can be made of Kate L. Turabian's A Manual for Writers of Term Papers, Theses and Dissertations, 6th edition, 1996.

Except when quoting from other writings, writers of papers are urged to use inclusive language. For example, generic language phrased in sex-specific terms and the use of gender designations for inanimate objects should be avoided (e.g. "brother" when the meaning is human being or person; "her" as the pronoun for an inanimate object). Language for "God" should be selected with great care so that the metaphors and grammatical forms are faithful to the biblical revelation of God whose being transcends titles, names and metaphors. The following may be helpful guides: Keith Watkins, Faithful and Fair, (Nashville, TN: Abingdon Press, ©1981) and "Inclusive Language Guidelines for Use and Study in the United Church of Christ," June 1980, United Church of Christ Leadership Resources, P.O. Box 179, St. Louis, MO, 63166
As a graduate theological school, Christian Theological Seminary endorses the normal canons of an academic community. One important aspect of those canons pertains to cheating and plagiarism. It is assumed that all persons in the CTS community will adhere rigorously to conventional scholarly standards in the preparation of papers, reports, speeches, articles and examinations. The following statement is intended to review those general standards and to specify the consequences for violation of those standards in the CTS community.

Webster's Seventh New Collegiate Dictionary defines "plagiarize" as "to steal and pass off as one's own (the ideas and words of another); to present as one's own an idea or product derived from an existing source." To "cheat" is "to practice fraud or trickery; to violate rules dishonestly."

Despite the clarity of these definitions, today there is widespread carelessness and/or confusion about what constitutes plagiarism. Some people casually assume that ignorance of the canons of respectable scholarship is sufficient excuse for flouting them. On a matter so fundamental to the character of an academic community, ignorance and carelessness are not excuses.

Hendrickson makes some helpful specific warning about plagiarism (J. Raymond Hendrickson, The Research Paper, as quoted in "Policy Regarding Plagiarism," Brite Divinity School, Texas Christian University):

1. Your paper should be written largely in your words. You get information from your sources, but the expression of it should be your own. Normally, not more than 10% of your paper should be comprised of direct quotations.
2. It is not sufficient to credit only long direct quotations. Even short quotations of two or three words must be set off by quotation marks.
3. Do not make merely verbal changes ... a few omissions, a few substitutions of synonyms, a few changes in the tense of verbs. If you are so near to quoting, it would be better to give an exact quotation and to use quotation marks. But do not forget the first rule!
4. You must credit the sources from which you take every fact, idea or argument which is not your own.
5. You must credit the source from which you actually get the material, not the original source from which your source got it. As much as possible, you should verify the material in the original source; when you have done so, you may cite the original source as your own (pp. xiv-xv).
6. Cheating is generally more clearly understood. It includes plagiarism, copying or using the work of other students, collaborating with other students on tests or papers with the intention to deceive, using illicit aids during examinations, knowingly using, buying, selling, stealing or sharing of examinations or other assignments not authorized for release. The student who knowingly abets "intentions to deceive" is also cheating.

Plagiarism and cheating at CTS will be dealt with in the following manner:

1. Any plagiarized work, or any work on which a student has been known to cheat, will be graded "F."
2. Every case of strongly suspected or proven plagiarism or cheating shall be reported by the professor to the Dean.
3. The professor shall discuss each case of suspected cheating or plagiarism with the student and the Dean. The professor shall then determine whether she or he should (a) assign an "F" for the particular work only or (b) assign an "F" for the course in which the cheating or plagiarism is alleged to have occurred. The Dean may also recommend suspension from the Seminary for one or more semesters (with suspension action to be noted on the student's transcript).
4. Item 3a above is the normal course of action to be taken by all professors in cases of cheating or plagiarism. Item 3b also may be taken by the professor. Suspension from the Seminary requires action by the Basic Degrees Committee (basic degree students) or the Advanced Professional Studies Committee (STM and D.Min. students).
5. If a student denies plagiarism or cheating, while the professor's allegation is maintained, the student shall have the right to a hearing before the Basic Degrees Committee/Advanced Professional Studies Committee.
6. If a student is involved in a subsequent case of cheating or plagiarism, she or he normally will be dismissed from the Seminary permanently, by action of the Basic Degrees Committee/Advanced Professional Studies Committee.
