How does the sense of self emerge and evolve throughout life? What are the cultural (↔), familial, intrapsychic and spiritual forces that serve to forge our sense of self and other? Using family systems (🗹) and psychoanalytic theory (Ψ) as basic structures, this course will consider the biological sequence of human development, with attention to ethnicity, family context, gender, identity and faith (♂). Once the basic sense of self has been established our focus shifts, in the second half of life, to the demands of individuation and religious experience as they impinge on our established sense of self, other and God. We will consider faith as the capacity to find and make meaning in the face of life’s challenges.

NB: This course is designed to meet the human development course requirement for Mental Health Counselor and Marriage and Family Therapy licensure. “An understanding of the nature and needs of individuals at all developmental levels, including: a. theories of individual and family development and transitions across the life-span; b. theories of learning and personality development; c. human behavior including an understanding of developmental crises, disability, addictive behavior, psychopathology, and environmental factors as they affect both normal and abnormal behavior; d. strategies for facilitating development over the lifespan; and e. ethical considerations.” (Taken from the CACREP course content standards).

P-531 includes essential knowledge for careers in ministry, chaplaincy, Christian education, marriage and family therapy and pastoral psychotherapy, including the ability to make informed assessments of help-seeker needs based on a working knowledge of life-cycle stages and cultural norms.

Readings:

Required texts: (all required texts are also on library reserve)

Reserve/Presentation Texts: (available on 3 hour reserve)

(NB – Any additional readings will also be available on library 3-hour reserve, and/or available on MLS).
Requirements and Evaluation:

Your final evaluation for the course will be based on class participation (15%), a small group presentation (25%), 2 observation papers of 7 pages (20% each) and a multiple choice final exam modeled on state licensure Mental Health Counselor and Marriage and Family Therapist examinations (20%). The average preparation time to complete all assignments is between 6-9 hours per week or 1-1.5 hours a day. The expectations for each requirement are as follows:

1) Class participation (15%) will be evaluated based on your consistent, attentive presence in class. Verbal participation should give evidence of receptivity to the questions and ideas of others as well as effective articulation of one's own views. Completing assigned readings before class is essential to effective participation.

2) Small group presentation (25%): You will have one session (45 minutes total) in which to make a group presentation on a topic relevant for the developmental phase we are considering. For example, a presentation on early adolescence could focus on body image and identity or a presentation on mid-life could focus on the “sandwich generation” of middle-aged adults caring for dependent children and aging parents simultaneously. You will be paired with other class members who are also interested in your first or second choice life cycle stage. Your group will first need to determine a specific topic relevant for that stage (read chapters from Kelcourse or Carter & McGoldrick to get ideas), then assign tasks within the group such as research, power point presentation creation, leading discussion, etc.

The ideal presentation will include the following: 1) A reading chosen at least one week in advance of 10-20 pages that will provide background information for your chosen topic, 2) a bibliography with at least 12 entries including books, articles and not more than 3 informative web sites relevant for your topic, 3) a power point presentation outlining key elements of your topic, 4) questions for class discussion that will be moderated by the presenters. Feel free to discuss possible topics with the instructor as needed. Items 2-4 must be supplied on the date you present.

At the end of your presentation time everyone - including the presenters - will be asked to fill out brief evaluations. Class responses will be considered in assigning presentation grades

3) First observation paper (20%): 7 pages due 10/18 or 10/25
This paper has two parts: observation and theoretical reflection. Find a child between the ages of 3 months to 3 years (no younger or older) that you can observe in a neutral manner in the company of others. The child should be a stranger, not a member of your own family or a family you know well.

First, in 2-3 pages, describe 5-10 minutes of observed behavior on the part of the child. Your description should be as objective as possible; you are like a camera, recording without inference. Next, in 3-5 pages, use theories from the readings to explain the behavior you observed. Be sure to ascertain the age of the child and state it clearly at the beginning of your paper. For toddlers it may be helpful to include a sketch of the room in which the observation occurred. Include a genogram of the child’s immediate family if possible. Be sure to obtain permission to observe – letters of request will be supplied.
4) Second observation paper (20%): 7 pages due 11/8 or 11/15
This paper also has two parts. 1) Identify and describe a critical incident in the life of an adolescent. The adolescent can be you (as you were then), an acquaintance or a teenager you interview (not a family member). 2) Use theories read in class to elucidate the incident described. How can the incident be understood in terms of adolescent developmental tasks?

5) Final exam: Two hour, multiple choice and essay closed book take home exam.
Sample exam questions will be distributed on or before Meeting #12 (11/29). The exam will be handed out in class on 12/6 (meeting #13) and due by NOON the following Monday, 12/12 (in hard copy or, if necessary, via e-mail attachment, MS Word, NOT fax).

NB: All assignments are to be typed, double-spaced, 12 point font. Please use APA format: (Author, date, pages) for both text references and bibliography – see Kelcourse, ed., or the APA publication manual for examples. Be sure to include name, date, title, headings and page numbers on all papers. Be careful to avoid plagiarism by including references for all citations, especially page numbers for direct citations per APA format. Read planner pages 46-50 for general paper guidelines.

Criteria for grading:
Written work will be evaluated for 1) clarity of expression – please proofread! (proofreading includes sentence structure, paragraph structure, spelling, punctuation), 2) acuity of observation (whether of oneself or another), 3) accurate use of theory (proper stage, appropriate theorists, accurate and complete citations, etc.), 4) creativity and originality, including thoughtful dialogue between the perspectives of psychology, theology, faith, morality and spirituality.

The oral component of presentations and class participation will be evaluated based on your consistent ability to ask thoughtful questions, contribute to class and group discussion, and demonstrate thorough appropriation of course material including research you may use for your presentation. Please avoid the extremes of either never speaking or dominating the airwaves. When giving your group presentation you are responsible for the accuracy of the information you present. You are also required to respect time limits.

Class process (approximate):

First hour – 2:15-3:00 Meet together in main classroom (room 168) for lecture or group presentations, followed by a 15 minute break.

Second hour – 3:15 -4:10 Lecture and discussion (following presentations)

Final hour – 4:20 -5 - Further discussion, experiential exercises and/or video illustrations of course material.
Goals:
This course is intended to be a theoretical and experiential introduction to clinical reflection. You will be expected not only to retain facts and absorb concepts, but also to develop your "observing ego" in relation to self and others. This includes giving attention to words, thoughts, feelings, body language, fantasies and dreams as subjectively observed or as expressed by others. In general, you are asked to maintain a curious, non-judgmental stance to the best of your ability. A rigid, reactive stance (ex: "I'm right, you're wrong") is unlikely to be conducive to your learning. You are encouraged to express your likes and dislikes in relation to course material. Evaluations collected during the final class will receive careful attention after grades have been distributed.

If you leave this class with an enhanced ability to be attentive and curious about your own experience and that of others, you will have fulfilled the primary objective of the course. You will find the open attitude thus developed to be a substantial asset in ministry, be it congregational leadership, chaplaincy, counseling or other forms of service. Openness must of course be balanced with clear commitments based on your own experience of faith and sense of self. The course may be used to clarify these commitments as well. As you read and reflect in this course you may come to recognize that even in present time “we are all the ages we ever were” (Kelcourse, Ed., 2004).
